Sexual violence occurs when you are forced, threatened or manipulated into any sexual contact against your will. Sexual contact without your consent is sexual assault, whether the offender is a stranger or someone you know.

Sexual assault can happen to anyone at any age, place, or time. The way a person dresses or acts does not cause sexual assault. It is never the victim-survivor's fault.

Sexual violence is a crime of power and control. It is caused by a decision to control and violate someone in the most personal way. It is not caused by gender, sexual desire or sexual orientation of the victim or perpetrator.

Sexual Violence includes:

- Rape – forced sexual intercourse
- Sodomy – forced anal or oral sex
-  Forced object penetration – penetrating someone's vagina or anus or causing that person to penetrate himself or herself, against that person's will
- Unwanted sexual touching
- Sexual contact with minors, whether consensual or not
- Sexual contact with a person who lacks the capacity to give consent
- Incest – non-consensual sexual contact between family members or sexual abuse of a minor by a family member
- Any unwanted sexual contact

How Can Someone “Force” You to Have Sex?

Most sexual assaults involve some type of force, but force is not always physical. Some ways someone can force you to have sex without using a weapon or physical violence includes:

- Using threats to intimidate or scare you
- Threatening to harm a friend, family member, service animal or pet
- Threatening to “out” you
- Using the position of authority to get you to agree to do something sexual
- Having sex with you when you are too intoxicated from alcohol or medications to say “no” or to consent
- Overpowering you physically
- Not taking “no” for an answer
- Manipulating you by not telling you the truth

Reactions to Sexual Assault

A person may experience a few, many or none of the following emotions and behaviors after a sexual assault. There is no “typical” way to respond to sexual violence.

- Depression
- Shock, disorientation and difficulty concentrating
- Unwanted and/or intrusive memories and flashbacks
- Being afraid and on guard
- Anger
- Self-blame, guilt, and shame
- Suicidal thoughts
- Emotional withdrawal, numbness
- Negative beliefs about self, family, friends and the future
- Problems with relationships
- Sleep disturbances, and nightmares
- Physical symptoms (stomach aches, migraines)
- Problematic coping behaviors (avoidance of memories, denial, alcohol or drug abuse)

Trauma caused by sexual violence may influence a person’s sense of safety. LGBTQ+ survivors often experience increased fear due to societal reactions.

If You Are Sexually Assaulted

- Go to a safe place, if possible. If you are in danger, call 911.
- Tell someone about the assault – a family member, friend, caregiver, service provider or other trusted person.
- Call the SARC Helpline – a Sexual Assault Response Advocate (SARA) is trained to help you understand your medical and legal options and provide emotional support.
- Consider going to a hospital emergency department for a medical exam. They can provide a forensic exam to collect evidence, determine if you have injuries, test for sexually transmitted infections and provide treatment options.
- If possible, to preserve evidence, try not to bathe, change clothes, comb your hair or urinate. If you cannot wait until you arrive at a facility, and suspect you have been drugged, save your first urine in a clean container and take it with you to the hospital. If you have changed clothes, place your clothes in a paper bag and bring them to the hospital. A forensic exam can collect forensic evidence that may be on your body and clothing that can assist with case investigation and prosecution.
- Consider reporting the assault to law enforcement. Sexual assault is a crime. Your report may enable police to hold the perpetrator accountable and may prevent another assault.
- If at any time you feel you were not treated respectfully by medical providers or law enforcement, you deserve to be supported free of discrimination. Call the SARC Helpline 24/7 to speak with an advocate about your options.

If Someone You Know Has Been Sexually Assaulted - Supporting LGBTQ+ Survivors

- Encourage them to talk. Listen without judging.
- Tell them you believe them, no one deserves to be sexually assaulted and it is not their fault.
- Ask if they are safe. If they are still in imminent danger, call 911.
- Offer to go to the hospital with them. Even days or weeks after an assault, medical attention may be needed.
- Offer to call the SARC Helpline for more information and support.
- Ask if they need any accommodations to access help.
- Support their right to make their own decisions about reporting the crime and seeking medical attention, to the extent possible.
- Do not tell others without their permission unless you are mandated to report. If you are mandated to report, and the situation meets the mandatory reporting requirements of suspected abuse, neglect, or an emergency situation involving an adult who is incapacitated or a minor, contact Delaware Department of Services for Children, Youth and their Families online or by phone at 800-292-9582.
